

COUNT VOUNTEERS NEEDED

Each spring the river herring runs along the entire coast of Massachusetts are monitored by volunteers that spend 10 minutes a visit counting herring and recording environmental data. These data are important for tracking the size of populations. The data are sent to the MA Division of Marine Fisheries for state-wide analysis. Towns, watershed associations, and local non-profit groups also use the data to keep track of how their local runs are doing.

After receiving training, volunteers are expected to commit to a 10 minute time block at least once a week for two months. It is a great way to spend some time in nature and help the herring!

Below is information about who to contact on Cape Cod and the South Shore if you'd like to become a volunteer.
